WHEREAS, one of the top priorities in the agenda of the City of Mandaluyong is the welfare of its children particularly their physical and mental well-being;

WHEREAS, the schools, considered as the second home of the students, play a vital role in the shaping of the children's physical and mental welfare;

WHEREAS, the foods and drinks sold to the students/children in schools should, at all times, be clean, safe, healthy, and free from any harmful substances that may or will affect the children's health now and/or in the future;

WHEREAS, as per studies, carbonated drinks or soft drinks are rich in sugar, caffeine, artificial sweeteners, and carbonic acids which can be harmful to health for both adults and children;

WHEREAS, the high levels of caffeine in soft drinks could disrupt sleep and lead to anxiety and DNA damage and hyperactivity, especially among children;

WHEREAS, as per further studies, soft drinks are also linked to obesity, kidney and liver damage, elevated blood pressure, teeth erosion, and stomach problems, and that alarm warning signals were sounded on "fruit, sports, or energy drinks" marketed as healthy drinks but actually contain excessive sugar and calories;

WHEREAS, nutritionist–dietitians from the Philippine Children's Medical Center (PCMC) said that each bottle of energy drink contains around 50 mg of caffeine – which is even higher than coffee and that each bottle contains around 1,000 mg of Taurine, of which a child needs only 1–10 mg/day;

WHEREAS, a 2007 study from Yale University linked soft drinks consumption to a decrease in calcium, higher risks of Type II diabetes, higher caloric intake and body weight;

WHEREAS, a 2013 study from the Bangor University in North Wales suggested that frequent soft drinks consumption is linked to developing an "inefficient metabolism" and that soft drinks can interfere with the "body's ability to burn fat and handle rises in blood sugar";

WHEREAS, a 2012 study from the University of Oregon and Michigan State University found that children aged 3–5 years old, who consumed sugary drinks, tended to avoid vegetables and preferred snacks high in calories and sodium like potato chips;

WHEREAS, further studies showed that some energy drinks, sports drinks, punches and iced teas and drinks containing caffeine, information usually found at the "contents" of the labels, may have harmful effects, in the future, to one's health especially in children.
